OUR GREENBACK FACTORY.

Where Uncle Sam Turns Out Paper Money and Postage Stamps.

One of the most interesting sights at the national capital to the hundreds of thousands of strangers who yearly visit Washington is the bureau of engraving and printing, where the government turns out immense amounts of the paper money which we daily see in circulation.

Much of this paper money—greenbacks and gold and silver certificates—is issued directly by the government itself, while the remainder is prepared for issue by the national banks throughout the country. These issues are printed from engraved steel plates of the finest workmanship on a peculiar, distinctive paper, which, it is said, counterfeiters have never yet been able to imitate. This establishment also produces government bonds whenever there is a call for such. In addition, postage stamps are manufactured there in vast quantities, recently at the rate of 30,000,000 a day or about 10,000,000,000 per year. This aggregate bids fair to increase annually and in time to reach huge proportions.

While the products of the bureau are interesting, the mechanical devices employed by it are most ingenious, comprising many automatic machines of wonderful efficiency. The utmost vigilance is exercised in guarding the products of the bureau, and generally everything proceeds there in the most systematic and efficient manner.—Leslie's.

CHINESE SIGNBOARDS.

Quaint Inscriptions That Appear Over the Shops in Peking.

In his book, "Meeting the Sun," W. Simpson gives some amusing examples of signboards to be seen above shops in Peking—"Shop of Heaven Sent Luck," "The Shop of Celestial Principles," "The Nine Felicities Prolonged," "Mutton Shop of Morning Twilight," "The Ten Virtues All Complete," "Flowers Rise to the Milky Way."

"'In these signs,' says Mr. Simpson, 'we can see that the Chinaman can combine the soul of a poet with the pocket of a shopman. Carlyle quotes a Chinese signboard, 'No Cheating Here,' but I could not find anything like it in the list. 'Good and Just According to Heaven' ought to satisfy the ideal notions of the author of 'Sartor Resartus.' 'The Honest Pen Shop of Li' implies that other pen shops are not honest.

"'The Steel Shop of the Pockmarked Wang' suggests that any peculiarity of a shopman may be used to impress the memory of the customers. A charcoal shop calls itself 'The Fountain of Beauty,' and a place for the sale of coal indulges in the title of 'Heavenly Embroidery.' An oil and wine establishment is the 'Neighborhood of Chief Beauty,' a description the realization of which it is hard to conceive anywhere in Peking. 'The Thrice Righteous' is a pretension one would scarcely expect from an opium shop."

Dickens Used Real Names.

Perhaps the most curious of Dickens' character names is Stiggins, for Stiggins, which by Dickens' exertions has become a synonym for religious hypocrisy, is a real name and one, oddly enough, with religious associations of a genuine kind. Stiggins is, in fact, only a corruption of the name Stigand, the famous archbishop, who crowned King Harold and later on William I. Most of the names in "Pickwick" can be found in the directory. Pickwick itself, as we know, was taken from a coach at Bath, and the village of the name is still there, and it is not so very long ago that Mr. Dickens, K. C., called and examined a Mr. Pickwick in a law case. Snodgrass was once a fairly common English name and can still be found in America. Winkle and Tupman are real names, and a Sam Weller is buried at Eastbourne.

The Dead Sea.

Many persons imagine that the Dead sea in Syria is nothing but sea water of extreme saltiness, but that is a mistake. The name was given to the great salt lake because nothing could live in its waters. Owing to the density of the water fish cannot sink in it, and they could not live if they did, as some of the salts are powerful antiseptics which means that they are fatal to any form of life. There is about 3 per cent of chloride of lime in the Dead sea. About half the salt in the Dead sea is chloride of magnesium, whereas nearly all the salt in the ocean is just common table salt.—New York Sun.

The Poet's Lay.

Jackson—Our friend the poet seems to be in great feather tonight. He is laughing and talking at a great rate. Carrie—Yes. He wrote a poem today, and he is cackling over his lay.—Philadelphia Record.

"THIS is Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Brown; I called up to let you know I have just had a telephone installed in my home and I'll not have to bother you any more. —You've been very nice about letting me use your telephone, but I know I must have been a perfect nuisance.—Now that I have one of my own, I wonder how I ever did get along without it. Thank you again so much. Good-bye."

SECRET WRITING.

Simple Cipher System That Keeps Postcard Messages Private.

Postal cards would undoubtedly be in much greater demand than they are for purposes of correspondence but for the fact that the messages they convey are open to all through whose hands they may pass. Yet this objection is easily overcome.

There are some beautifully simple ciphers that are almost impossible for any one not in the secret to read. Only by luck, for instance, can even the expert find the key to a short message written in the "trellis" or "grill" cipher. It is extremely simple, and thousands of people use it to baffle folks who take an interest in the contents of postcards.

To use it all you have to do is to cut a few oblong holes in a blank postcard, place it over the postcard you mean to write on and write your message in the holes. Then take the upper card off and write some natural reading sentences round the cipher words.

Any inquisitive person reading the card when it reaches your correspondent's house will find a message of no interest whatever. Only your correspondent himself—or herself—can read the real message, and that by placing on the card a blank card cut in exactly the same way as your own.—Pearson's Weekly.

Halcyon Days.

The seven days preceding and the seven following the winter solstice were called by the ancients "halcyon days." This phrase is derived from a fable which sets forth that Halcyone, a princess who grieved so deeply for the loss at sea of her spouse, was sent thither in pity in the form of a halcyon bird or kingfisher. According to the legend, the halcyon bird had during the time of breeding the power of lulling the waves, and it was believed at this time the sea was always calm and might be navigated in perfect security. Experience, of course, dispelled this fable; but, like many another old world story, it has left behind it a distorted meaning. In this case the connection between the old and the new significance is clear, for the term, once expressive of peace and calm upon the waters, is equally expressive of tranquillity upon the sea of life.

The Lump Fish.

Did you ever hear of the lump fish? Well, it's a peculiar species found in salt water. This strange fish possesses a sucker formed by two ventral fins, which are so shaped that when the fish reclines on a rock the fins act as suckers and hold it firmly. As soon as the eggs are deposited in shallow pits between stones, the female feeling that she has done her part, deserts them and the male at once assumes charge and guards the eggs until they hatch out and then the young until they are able to take care of themselves. In moving round he is closely followed by the numerous family which has given rise to the term "hen and chickens." At times they attach themselves to the sides of their parent by their sucking disks, thus presenting a singular appearance.

Dickens Spared Not His Pen.

With so many demands upon his pen one would expect to find Dickens availing himself of all possible brevities in his correspondence at least. But a glance through his letters shows that he scorned all such opportunities and preferred to spell everything out. The date of the months, for example, are given in words instead of figures. "Monday, sixteenth January;" "Tuesday, seventh March;" "Wednesday, twelfth April;" "twenty-sixth May," "Friday evening, nineteenth May"—in this way are all his letters dated. He spared not his pen.

NOTICE.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted at a meeting of the Town Council of the Town of Bloomfield, Essex County, New Jersey, held on the 18th day of March, 1912:

Whereas, it is in the interest of the Town of Bloomfield, in the County of Essex and State of New Jersey, that a concrete curb be constructed on both sides of Glenwood avenue, and that a bituithic pavement upon a six-inch base be constructed the entire width of roadway of Glenwood avenue, between the southwesterly side of Bloomfield avenue and the northerly side of Linden avenue in the Town of Bloomfield, hereinafter more particularly described.

Now, therefore, be it resolved by the Town Council of the Town of Bloomfield, in the County of Essex and State of New Jersey, that it is in the interest of said town to have a concrete curb and bituithic pavement constructed in the roadway of said Glenwood avenue, between Bloomfield avenue and Linden avenue.

Beginning in Glenwood avenue at the southwesterly side of Bloomfield avenue; thence running along Glenwood avenue in a southwesterly direction fourteen hundred and eighty-five (1485) feet, more or less, to the northerly side of Linden avenue and ending there.

Notice is hereby given that objections in writing to the above resolution or to the said proposed improvement shall be filed with the Town Clerk on or before Monday, April 15, 1912, on which date the Town Council of the Town of Bloomfield will meet at 8 o'clock P. M. in the Council Chamber, National Bank Building, Bloomfield, Essex County, New Jersey, to consider any such objections that may be filed as aforesaid.

By order of the Town Council.
RAYMOND F. DAVIS,
Town Clerk.
